Multi-generational manufacturer of bar and hospitality equipment, Krowne, is transforming the industry

Founded over 75 years ago, Krowne is the largest manufacturer of bar equipment, beverage dispensing systems, and plumbing products in the US. The company's long and storied history spans across multiple generations, as co-owner, Kyle Forman, begins by explaining: "When my great-uncle, Peter Miller, purchased Krowne, it was a small regional operation, primarily focused on the bar equipment sector that manufactured and sold basic bar equipment, ice bins and other similar items. He continued building the business and its manufacturing capacity at a steady rate for many years, until my father, Roger Forman, and his business partner, Frank Bastante, bought him out and took over the business. The two of them really took Krowne to the next level. The brand expanded nationally, and alongside they added a whole host of new and different product categories, far and beyond bar equipment."

Under new ownership, Krowne expanded into refrigeration, faucets, gas connectors, and a variety of other categories that are offered in today's market. Through different

We were recently highlighted in Manufacturing Today which celebrated our innovative approach to product design and our commitment to high quality products and services, which has solidified our reputation in the industry. The article emphasized our continuous efforts in sustainability and efficient production processes, setting a benchmark for industry standards.
