Electronic Sensor Faucets 101

February 27, 2023 | Plumbing Series

Electronic sensor faucets, also known as hands-free faucets, are becoming increasingly popular in both commercial and public settings. These faucets use sensors to automatically turn on and off the flow of water, eliminating the need to physically touch the faucet handle. This "hands-free" technology allows electronic sensors faucets to grant optimal sanitation while being able to conserve the amount of water used.

Find all the benefits of electronic sensor faucets on our latest blog post!

Krowne Bar Ambassador Troy Clarke Serves up Success

Whether you're in the planning stages of a brand-new build or looking to refresh an outdated, inefficient bar setup, bartender ambassador Troy Clarke has the skills you need to transform your tavern from uninspiring to unforgettable. Clarke's expert bar consultancy services are available through a unique partnership with prominent bartending equipment manufacturer Krowne. The program was initially conceived to bridge the gap between bar owners, designers, engineers, and seasoned bartenders with first-hand knowledge of what does (and doesn't) help streamline work behind the bar. Join the KaTom team as we catch up with Clarke and get the scoop on the secret behind the Krowne ambassador program's success.

Check out the awesome article about Krowne Bar Ambassador Troy Clarke, where he speaks on his partnership with Krowne, the emerging technologies of the bar industry, and how a bar ambassador can help you design your dream bar today!
